

A level choices and entry requirements for University

A recent policy exchange report has highlighted a lack of transparency on the part of Universities about how they perceive certain A level subjects. It found that only Cambridge University and the London School of Economics publish a full list of less preferred subjects. However, other Universities also view some subjects as undesirable.

These subjects may include Accounting, Art and Design, Business, Dance, Drama Studies, Film Studies, ICT, Law, Media Studies, Sports Studies and Travel and Tourism.

If there is a particular subject that you wish to study at a particular University it is always best to check with the University directly, initially by checking their online prospectus or the paper copies in the library. The only way to be absolutely certain is to speak directly to an admissions tutor.
